SCALING UP THE GROW BIOINTENSIVE AGRICULTURE PRACTICES BEYOND BORDERS

Kouadio Yao Gildas Didier an Ivorian taking three months internship

If only we can just decide to make our surroundings green, Africa and the entire world at large can be green. Toward this ultimate goal, G-BIACK is continuously spreading the GROW BIOINTENSIVE practices not only to Kenyans but also to people in other countries, through internships and exchange programmes. All interns are trained in GROW BIOINTENSIVE practices and other ecological practices and by the end of their internship period they are well equipped to establish demonstration gardens and to train farmers in their own countries.

Kouadio Yao Gildas Didier is the latest intern to be trained at G-BIACK. He is an Ivorian living in Ghana as a refugee and he hopes to acquire this knowledge so that he can take it back and train his fellow refugees. He plans to establish a demonstration garden once he returns to Ghana.

We hope to continue spreading GROW BIOINTENSIVE METHODS in all corners of the world and we wish to encourage anyone who wants to become a Biointensive farmer to attend our trainings any time, January through December.

Karibuni sana — you are most welcome!
