Round two

After that first successful visit, farmers from Kimaeti came back to G-BiACK for a second time, this time with even more members and with an entirely new project. They came specifically to learn about GROW BIOINTENSIVE Agriculture and the wide range of activities taking place at G-BiACK, to gain practical skills and insights they could take back home. The return visit was a clear sign of the strong partnership that has been built, as farmers expressed their excitement to continue learning from G-BiACK’s demonstration gardens and community-focused programs.

The farmers engaged in a two day sessions that had garden practicals and classroom sessions. They all showed Eager to deepen their understanding of agroecology, sustainable farming, and community-based practices. Their enthusiasm and willingness to learn just shows a growing commitment to adopting innovative methods that can strengthen food sovereignty and resilience back home.

“I am so happy to meet Mwalimu Nderitu and to learn that he impliments all he talks about while training. I am one of his student..” ~ Kimaeti Chair
